

NCPHP Speaks About Burnout and Resilience with VA Employees

April 10, 2018

This month NCPHP professionals traveled across the state to educate Veterans Administration employees about NCPHP's services, which aid in recovery from substance use disorders and other conditions that could impair a provider's ability to safely provide care to their patients.

On April 6, NCPHP CEO Dr. Joe Jordan and Medical Director Dr. Clark Gaither gave two, one-hour educational presentations at the Greenville VA. Focusing on burnout and resilience, they shared information about NCPHP's services and the dangers of burnout with approximately 40 VA employees, including doctors, nurses and support staff.

Dr. Clark Gaither and Dr. Joe Jordan (center) with two participants at the Greenville, NC VA April 6, 2018

Physician burnout is a condition facing healthcare providers nationwide. Across the U.S., more than 50 percent of physicians have experienced significant burnout symptoms. Drs. Jordan and Gaither shared the signs and risks associated with physician burnout with the Greenville VA employees. On Friday, April 13, they will travel to the Morehead City VA to present on the same topic.

NCPHP regularly presents at hospitals, private practices, associations, society meetings and conferences to educate medical professionals on NCPHP services. NCPHP experts are also available to speak on a wide range of topics related to substance use disorders and other issues that can negatively impact the safety, care, and services delivered by medical professionals.